This holiday season, God answers prayer in unexpected ways. David Webster is the top clerk in the men's department at the most luxurious department store in Manhattan, Diff's. The high-profile clientele sing his praises. The bosses regularly commend him for his detailed and grand work. Other employees know they can rely on him any time they need assistance. To his coworkers, he has everything going for him except a wife. Little do they know David's got his heart set on one among them, the lovely Ann Marie. But David has a problem. To get married and start the family he longs for, he needs a promotion so he can buy an engagement ring and get a larger apartment. Mr. Diff's big contest may just be the chance he's been looking for. To win, he'll need to come up with an idea that will make Diff's the place to shop this Christmas. Soon he's sure he has a winner, but as he encounters the homeless and poor, all victims of the Great Depression, he begins to realize what he's already won. God has a special gift for David to help him and all of Diff's in Bringing in the Holidays.
